

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An information processing apparatus includes a display, a common button, and one or more cursor keys. The common button functions as both an activation button for activating a predetermined program and a determination button for determining an item selected from options appearing on the display while the predetermined program is activated. The cursor keys are used for selecting the item and are arranged adjacent to the common keys.